A WEEKLY NONSENSE

WEAKLY THE

Issue No. 14

Read this.
excerpt from Abigail Thorn's Climate Greif

MEDIA OF THE WEEK
Intrusion in 'In The Mood For Love'

Weakly Word
featuring Jua

JUKEBOX
SONGS THAT MAKE YOU DREAM A FILM

Tuesday, 1st April 2025

LIKED THE WEAKLY?

This zine needs YOU to keep it running, by sending in your musings, from your notes app to the backs of your books.

It is printed every first working day of the week- and distributed amongst whoever the editor runs into first. It's special in a way where you know that someone probably carries your poem in their wallet.

You can also find the Weakly and more zines at DelliZine*, a zine collective devoted to sponsoring art. Catch us at* @delliziné and delliziné.github.io*.*

E-mail your thoughts, notes, pictures, sketches, sighing and crying to lillisticke@gmail.com*. Or maybe bump into me in the corridor. God knows, I love that.*

Didn't get a physical copy? Print your own!!!

editor's note

Part of growing up is realising maybe you're not, as your mum told you, the greatest woman on the planet. Maybe you're a man. Maybe you became a man, either way you disappointed your mom. I know I did, even though she still tells me I'm the greatest woman on the planet. I am gradually having this revelation at the ripe old age of 19 and a half-ish, that maybe, just maybe, I'm not as awesome as I thought (a friend said he discovered stoicism in sixth grade, further illustrating my tardiness) I obviously went through the whole self loathing i'm-not-okay-i-promise thing you do when you're fourteen, hormonal and have acne and bad friends but here I am, but it is now that I make mistakes, and I face the consequences of my actions. Every unfortunate thing that happens is a direct result of a decision I consciously take. I cannot blame the sky, my mom, my period, the Man anymore. Everything is in my hands, if it slips through my clumsy fingers, its gone, and I had the power to stop it, and I failed. Its a miserable thought, but I have to come to terms that there are things I am bad at, there are even things I can't do at all. I don't always do the right thing and sometimes it is not beyond my power to the right thing- sometimes I am just... lazy. Or mean. I would like to believe that I don't hurt people, but I do get hurt- whats to say I don't do to the same? I didn't come here to make you face your morality today- I just wonder how I became this way. Was I always this way? This is a thought spiral I seldom wish to go down, but now find it at my doorstep more often than ever, and when the whirlwind catches up to me, I need to sit down and remind myself that if not the greatest, hell, even if not a good one, I still am a woman (questionable) on a planet (which is dying) but still I am, still I am, still I am and everything is in my hands, in my hands, in my hands.

Read this.

The opposite of Climate Denial might be Climate Despair: the idea that there's nothing we can do anymore. It's too late. The Apocalypse is coming... Part of the awful tragedy of climate change, I think is, that we know the names of the people responsible... these people may never face justice for what they have done and that sucks. This is maybe a little spicy for mainstream YouTube audiences, but in his book Why Marx Was Right, British theorist Terry Eagleton says one of the reasons Uncle Karl's ideas are still persuasive to so many people is that they acknowledge the tragedy of the way things are right now. And fascism is persuasive to so many liberals because it also acknowledges that a lot of things just suck, and offers a very easy but wrong explanation. One of the advantages of facing the overwhelming, grief-like nature of climate change is that once we realise it's all one problem we have a lot more allies than we thought. If you campaign for migrants' freedom of movement, you are fighting climate change. If you support Indigenous people's right to self-determination, if you support your local antifascists and people fighting police brutality, if you support demilitarisation and nuclear disarmament-it's all one planet... And rather than just not thinking about it or hoping for a perfect technical solution, seriously confronting the possibility that the world might end because of climate change is a chance to ask: What were the good bits? What was your favourite bit about living in a society? I really enjoyed cooking, and music, and theatre, and misusing my photography and lighting equipment to take extremely high quality nude photos. What were the bits of society that you'd maybe be okay with letting go of? Cause 'Apocalypse' doesn't actually mean the end of the world. It's a Greek word that means "the revealing of knowledge."

from Philosophy Tube's video essay Climate Greif

Weakly Word

walk with me a mile or two
every city is walkable
if it's with you

we can gaze at houses
plan our lives
i want to walk around delhi
with you by my side

the streetlights are dim
the breeze is light
to enjoy your company
oh what a delight!

walk with me will you even if it's a mile or two
i have a smile on my face
i hope you do too

-by Jo

MEDIA OF THE WEEK

I feel like a peeping tom when I watch Wong Kar Wai's In The Mood Love. It does not feel like a movie, as much a window, one whose curtain I have slightly lifted to look at its doomed protagonists. This intruder always lurks longer, halfway behind poles, or through the grails of a window. And Mrs Chan and Mr Chow know, they know of this intruder among them, so they hide, they hurry, they bend the visuals. Doors are shut in your face, lights switched off and footseps hurry away. They talk in hushed whispers, or sometimes never at all. The colours are saturated with hazy yellow tint, as if in memory, being whispered into a friend's ear. A scandal which never happens is witnessed, quietly numbed by the sound of rain lashing against the the cold haird stone streets.

JUKEBOX

SONGS THAT MAKE YOU DREAM A FILM
(doesn't make sense but it DOES, like, how you start imaging a story along the songnajsjjdksms)

1. All We Ever Knew- Head and the Heart
2. Tum Ho Yahan- Abhilasha Sinha
3. Don't Take My Money- Bleachers
4. Vienna- Billy Joel
5. Sugar We're Going Down- Fall Out Boy
6. Jab Koi Baat Bigad Jaye- Kumar Sanu
7. Uptown Girl- Billy Joel

curated by Gogol